Talking about something great

One line that says what this is,
and one that says why it matters

About me

Two short sections for the speaker slide. Photos stack full-bleed on the right when the talk supplies them.

And the company

Keep each one to three lines. The heading does the work, the paragraph gives the room something to read while you talk.

One idea, said plainly

For section breaks, and for the lines
you want the room to remember.

Four things, side by side

Label

Two lines of body copy at most, or it stops being a label.

Type

Unbounded for the noun, Instrument Serif for the counter-phrase.

Contrast

Everything on the slide clears 7.5:1 against the ground.

Space

Hierarchy is size and space. No borders, no cards.

A short list

- No borders.
- No ALL CAPS, eyebrows and labels included.
- No rounded cards with tinted fills.
- Type runs large, and headings stay short.

What the base gives you

- Cover with portrait
- Statement
- Pairs
- Bullets
- A dense list like this one
- Code panels
- Real syntax highlighting
- A timing bar, not page numbers
- HTML output
- PDF output
- A Keynote master
- One source for all three

One field, two ways

With the plugin

the_field( 'subtitle' );

With core

register_post_meta( 'post', 'subtitle', [
    'type'          => 'string',
    'single'        => true,
    'show_in_rest' => true,

Four more lines, and the value now has a type, a schema and a REST route. The theme stops being the only thing that knows the field exists.

Kiitos. Questions?
